At times, we all get overwhelmed, but with support from friends and family, we can overcome that, but one has to be willing to talk about their concerns, and one lend an ear to hear. I know, easier said than done. I raise this topic, because as of late, there have been a rash of suicides and it gets noticeably worse during the holiday months lending an ear to listen and a simple conversation can make all the difference.

If you are the ones struggling, call the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline, which is available 24/7 at 1-800-273-8255.
